Healthy Treat Options

Finding commercial treats that have single or minimal healthy ingredients is very challenging. And I have not found any great soft training treats and why I make Grit's Limited Ingredient treats for training.

Here are some of our favorite purchased treats:

Northwest Naturals: https://www.nw-naturals.net/products/treats/
We use their whitefish treat as it is a single ingredient. They also have many other options with both single and multi ingredients.

Small Batch: https://smallbatchpets.com/treats-2
Small Batch offers both single source treats as well as a healthy option with multiple ingredients. You can also get different proteins, so it is a nice option for pets with sensitivities. A word of caution: Do not feed a lot of beef liver treats as it can cause copper toxicity based on diet plus the treats.

Green Juju: https://greenjuju.com/pages/all-products
Green Juju is another very healthy option that offers single protein as well as minimal healthy ingredient treats. These are a softer treat than the others.

Farm Hounds: http://shrsl.com/2ey6z-28ff-100gq
Farm hounds has many different types of treats and chews. They have the only bone that I recommend. My boys LOVE the hairy hide rolls. And all the jerky, strips, organs, etc. are winners. All of their options are single protein.

Most of the above can be found at your local upscale pet store. I do order Farm hounds direct and they offer a lot of great sales. Many can also be found at Dr. Judy Morgan's store: https://drjudymorgan.com/collections/dog-treats

Home options:

You can also use your healthy raw or cooked diet as a treat. Other great options are blueberries (sometimes you need to cut in half), asparagus, carrots, cucumber, celery, etc. Try different fruits and veggies and see what your dog likes. (Just do not use grapes, raisins, dark chocolate, macadamia nuts, onions or anything with xylitol)
